You’re invited to the 2015 African Wildlife Medicine: Capture, Transport & Herd Health Course! This course is designed to teach wildlife professionals, zoologists, wildlife veterinarians, and exotic wildlife owners/caretakers advanced techniques on the capture, transport, and immobilization of African wildlife. This will be a hands-on intensive continuing education seminar in which participants can expect 60 hours of field training and 20 hours of lecture. Dr. Cobus Raath, the former Head of Veterinary Services at Kruger National Park, will be the in-country instructor. The course cost is $7,000 until September 1, 2015, so be sure to register now! After September 1, the fee will be $7,500. This fee includes lodging, meals, and in-country transportation and fees. The fee does not include airfare to and from Johannesburg, South Africa and incidentals.

Register online at vetmed.tamu.edu/ce until September 17, 2015!
